

Working Bee August 25th

I arrived early and started pulling out the wire frames that were piled up near the Friends Shed, Robert Irvine and Kevin Jones turned up with boxes of plants that they had picked up from Ian Taylor that morning and not long after Maelor, Neil and Karen arrived.

We piled up the Ute and headed down to Red Gum Flat where we have been planting these last few working bees

The sun started to break through as we began planting Lomandra, Clustered Everlasting, Cassinia's and Acacia Verticillata and making up the large tree frames to protect them from kangaroos and Wallabies.

I went off to the Pump Shed Ford to do some water testing and met a couple of kids coming down the track on the other side of the creek.

Because of the water level they were forced to go back the way they came.

A good day's work
